

What is An Amphibian? Answers

1. The feature that defines an amphibian as an amphibian is that they are vertebrates – they have a backbone.
2. The difference between amphibians and fish is that amphibians can breathe atmospheric oxygen – oxygen in the air – and fish can only breathe oxygen from the water with their gills.
3. Examples could include:
 - ,when adult,
 - ,such as lizards and turtles,
 - ,called spawn,
 - ,usually in damp habitats,
4. Answers will vary. I think that amphibians lay their spawn among the water plants because when the tadpoles emerge they are near to their food - algae and other plants.
5. Answers will vary. I think that the jelly that covers the spawn protects them from predators in the water.
6. The adjective that describes the amphibians' gills are feathery.
7. The three groups of amphibians are frogs and toads, newts and salamanders and caecilians.
8. I think the sentence The only amphibians native to Britain are frogs, toads and newts means that these were the only amphibians that originated from Britain.
